Marinas are still viable investments as the popularity of recreational boating remains strong. Marina Dock Age sat down with the Simply Marinas team, Michelle Ash, owner and broker, and George Ash, national director, to discuss the state of the marina market and what sellers need to know.

Marina Dock Age (MDA): What is your role as a marina broker?

Simply Marinas (SM): We advise our clients on the much-needed presale strategic planning. The same principles apply to large operations or small marinas. We share our strategies with all marina owners for early and comprehensive preparation to position their marina for sale to achieve the highest possible value. We recently completed a seller's guide that's filled with our recommendations that come from decades of proven results including more than 250 marina transactions and more than $380 million in recent sales alone. (Request a copy at team@simplymarinas.com.)

MDA: What are some critical pieces of advice you offer sellers?

SM: Luck is not a strategy. We emphasize ongoing preparation from day one to position the marina for sale, not just when a marina owner decides to sell. Marina owners should pay attention to understanding the market and what buyers look for, identifying new profit centers, exploring expansion potential, taking care of deferred maintenance and maintaining reliable financial records. In addition, knowing what the impact of the sale is on their bottom line after depreciation and planning their exit strategy are essential.

MDA: Of your sellers, what do you see as the most common reason they are ready to sell?

SM: It is mainly about the timing, whether it is a good time to leverage their investment, a time for them to retire, or circumstances that would require them to sell.

MDA: How have marina prices changed over the past several years?

SM: Marina sales and pricing accelerated after the pandemic with a more robust interest in marina acquisitions in 2021, followed by 2022 and 2023. We are seeing slight stabilization at this time; however, due to new investors and Wall Street private equity firms' strong interest in marinas, this demand will continue to make marina investments viable.

MDA: Are more marinas being sold to corporations or individuals?

SM: Several existing and new corporations have been actively buying and consolidating marina acquisitions. However, several of our buyers are individuals or regional buyers and not large groups. Corporations focus on larger marinas with storage income and have stringent criteria concerning investment requirements, location, type of marina and upside. End users, local buyers and regional buyers are also very active in the market, often proving to be more suitable matches for many marinas sold. There is a buyer for each marina type.

MDA: How are corporate buyers and individual buyers different?

SM: The intent is different. Corporations acquire multiple marinas within similar locations for economies of scale and have the goal of selling their portfolio.

Individuals focus more on long term holdings and creating a family business and legacy.

MDA: Taking a longer view since you've been in the business so long, how has the market changed?

SM: More deals were closing with local buyers. Marina investments attracted fewer investors early on, while most gravitated to other commercial real estate asset types.

At this time, buyers are not limited by location; they consider marinas as desirable acquisitions due to their higher cap rates and accelerated depreciation compared to other asset types.

There is a significant shift in the market, with a much larger pool of qualified buyers now showing interest in marinas, this is further fueled by a substantial influx of cash from private equity groups, injecting a new level of competition into marina acquisitions.

MDA: How has the role of a marina broker changed through the years to meet the market?

Michelle Ash

George Ash

SM: These newer investors are focused on the bottom line rather than a lifestyle acquisition.

We work with the marina owner to present reliable financials and to produce the required due diligence package so there is no re-trading in the value of the marina down the line.

Our outreach and marketing are national and global because buyers are open to more than one location. Our sales velocity has accelerated, which is a testament to our growth and the success of our award-winning marketing outreach. Our Simply Marinas Network of marina buyers and investors, which we developed over the years, now has more than 14,000 marina investors.

To meet clients' needs, our team provides support to our clients from presale strategic planning and valuation to due diligence, financing, contract negotiations and exit strategy.

MDA: What have been some key learning moments in your career?

SM: The most rewarding aspect of our work has been the endearing relationships we have developed with our clients, who sometimes become friends. Several have become repeat clients who buy and then sell with us. We value each client and understand their goals and needs to help them achieve their end goal.

MDA: What are your predictions for where the marina market is heading?

SM: Based on the number of investors and private equity firms contacting us regarding marina acquisitions, we believe the market will continue to be a viable acquisition attractive to investors. Sophisticated marina buyers who contact us share their enthusiasm and confidence in the marina market.

Marina Valuation Explained

By MDA Staff Published on August 23, 2022

The term cap rate or capitalization rate is tossed around anytime the topic of marina sales comes up. In short, the cap rate is the rate of return that a buyer can expect when purchasing a marina and it's what is used in the income capitalization approach to determine a marina's value. By the math, a cap rate is found by dividing the Net Operating Income (NOI) or Earnings Before Interest, Taxes, Depreciation, and Amortization (EBITDA) by the purchase price. The goal for a seller is to have that rate as low as possible to achieve the highest sale. There are several factors to consider and actions to take in reaching that goal.

The intent of getting a marina valuation is to have an expert look over the operations and physical condition of a facility and determine what changes can be made to ensure the seller gets the best price on a sale.

George Ash, national director of Simply Marinas, said to do this efficiently requires planning ahead. "If you can think two or three years ahead and reach out for advice, I recommend it. We will look at your marina through a site assessment and a review of the financials to identify what you can do to make it more sellable. We'll tell you how to best position your marina for the highest possible sale value," Ash said.

Let P&L Reports be the Guide

A marina's income is shown through its P&L statements, which are used as a blueprint for what the business is doing, and for a marina consultant to identify what can and needs to be fixed both in terms of the facility and the bookkeeping.

Sellers should make a list of major capital improvements that occurred over the last three to five years. The expenses from these improvements, for instance adding a fuel dock or rehabilitating the docks, can often be justified as an add-back to the marina's Net Operating Income (NOI). Similarly, non-recurring maintenance items, like dredging, can be prorated or annualized.

In some cases, there is little distinction between business and personal expenses. Without clearly showing income and expenses, P&L statements will not shine a true light on the business, often leaving it to look less profitable than it really is. It is good practice to keep a tab of owner benefits by showing the appropriate supporting invoices and documents.

Put all income and expenses on the books, keeping it tight and transparent. "We advise sellers on how a buyer and their lender are going to look at the P&L and tax statements and how to best package and prepare

Let P&L Reports be the Guide

A marina's income is shown through its P&L statements, which are used as a blueprint for what the business is doing, and for a marina consultant to identify what can and needs to be fixed both in terms of the facility and the bookkeeping.

Sellers should make a list of major capital improvements that occurred over the last three to five years. The expenses from these improvements, for instance adding a fuel dock or rehabilitating the docks, can often be justified as an add-back to the marina's Net Operating Income (NOI). Similarly, non-recurring maintenance items, like dredging, can be prorated or annualized.

In some cases, there is little distinction between business and personal expenses. Without clearly showing income and expenses, P&L statements will not shine a true light on the business, often leaving it to look less profitable than it really is. It is good practice to keep a tab of owner benefits by showing the appropriate supporting invoices and documents.

Put all income and expenses on the books, keeping it tight and transparent. "We advise sellers on how a buyer and their lender are going to look at the P&L and tax statements and how to best package and prepare that information so it's more sellable. We will help identify potential add-backs such as owner benefits and non-recurring expenses that can be justified to adjust the EBITDA," Ash said.

Another caution that Ash highlighted is that income statements need to reflect full payroll expenses. If the owners are also the managers involved in the day-to-day business operations, yet don't receive a paycheck through payroll, the company's payroll expenses will appear low on the P&L report.

Savvy buyers will inevitably reduce the marina's net income by what the managing owners should have been paid. On the reverse side, if owners pay themselves too much, the marina will look less profitable. Payroll expenses reported on the P&L reports should match the actual labor hours that it takes to run the marina.

Recording all labor costs is also a reminder to buyers of how many people they may need to hire. Ash said many buyers keep the existing staff in place, especially in today's labor shortage, but if the owners were the managers there will be critical roles for a buyer to fill.

The Value of Full Slips

Because marinas are not simply storage businesses, but instead offer a host of other profit centers, a buyer will want to explore and assign value to each profit center on its own. Boat storage income, both slip and landside, as well as established commercial tenant lease income, will garner lower cap rates (higher values), in general. These income sources are also attractive because they have a lower expense ratio, are more stable, and are less labor-intensive than service or boat sales. "Boat owners need to keep their boats somewhere even if they can no longer afford the gas to use it or costs to repair it. The last thing to suffer during downtimes is storage," said Ash.

A final consideration for valuation is the marina's occupancy trend. Owners should provide occupancy rates and waitlist information over at least the past three years, as well as offer expectations for the coming years based on industry and economic trends. Buyers will want to see rent rolls and lease rate history so they can better estimate future success and compare the marina with its nearby competitors.

The paper trail of valuing a marina is a critical component to achieving a fair sales price, but location, the condition of infrastructure, the potential for expansion, and a top-notch staff in place, will all be factors that a buyer considers before making an offer. The location can't be changed, but with enough planning time, those wishing to sell can make changes to assure they walk away happy.

This transaction traffic reveals Simply Marinas' unique attributes, which include:

- The Simply Marinas network of 14,000-plus marina resort investors. This proprietary list allows the company to field offers within days without relying on outside marketing. This competitive bidding process often yields re-turns that exceed seller expectations.
- Simply Marinas works directly with national marina companies and investment funds often seeking to acquire multiple marinas, as well as with individual investors, owner-operators, and lifestyle buyers.
- Confidential offerings. Sellers trust Simply Marinas to discreetly handle confidential offerings and transactions. The firm recently facilitated the sale of a marina and RV park portfolio that included Four Corners Resort and Marina in Antioch, Tennessee. Based on his previous experience as a buyer working with Simply Marinas, the seller was confident the firm would respect the sensitive nature of his transaction.
- Financing facilitation. The Simply Marinas team is part of a private and a traditional lending network, and it has expanded its lending to marina acquisitions. This has proven helpful to buyer clients and to bringing the deal to the closing table.
- Cooperative partnerships. The firm continues to build on its network of national and international affiliates and cooperative relationships with colleagues and industry professionals.

- Commitment to service.

"We understand what makes marinas work, from the docks and restaurants to the back office and ledgers," said George Ash, Simply Marinas' national director, who studied hospitality, leisure management, and real estate finance. "We recognize an asset's current value and can advise buyers and sellers on how to create additional value."

Supporting the community

As a family-run business, Simply Marinas sees its clients as friends, with buyers often returning to the Ash family to resell the same property.

"It's all about giving back," said Simply Marinas Owner/Broker Michelle Ash, MBA, whose Ph.D. dissertation was in community partnerships, and post doctorate work in Total Quality Management. "As a former CEO with a PBS-affiliate public radio and television station, and a top membership producer for three chambers and a supporter of the marine industry, I understand the power importance of making connections and supporting the community. That enables us to maximize value and re-turns for every client transaction."

For Marina Sales, Confidentiality is King

By MDA Staff Published on March 28, 2023

When selling a marina, it might seem like the more people who hear about the sale, the more offers will roll in to put the seller in the driver's seat for high profit. When it comes to the unique business of a marina, however, confidentiality when selling or buying is key.

Imagine what might happen if a basin full of boaters or a trusted staff got wind of a potential sale. That could cause an abrupt departure of clients and employees damaging operations, goodwill, and business profitability. That's why brokers frequently work behind closed doors, relying on curated lists of pre-qualified buyers instead of mass marketing.

With more than 20 years of experience in the marina sales industry, Simply Marinas is one such brokerage that acknowledges the importance of confidentiality to the seller, buyer, and to the whole marina community. Confidentiality means keeping things quiet from pre-sale consultations and valuation to market listing, buyer due diligence, and on into closing. "We never state the name of the marina with our initial presentation to interested buyers," said Michelle Ash, owner and broker at Simply Marinas. Buyers are given a general overview of the property and its location but aren't given enough information to identify the facility. Once the pre-qualified buyer has been determined to be a good fit, they sign a non-disclosure agreement, and the broker asks the seller for authorization to share more details. Simply Marinas ensures owners are contacted only by private phone or email, preferably after hours, to avoid the risk of letting employees know the property is for sale.

List of Investors

To find the perfect buyer, instead of advertising a property for sale, Simply Marinas taps its proprietary list of 14,000 pre-qualified marina investors. Other brokers retain similar lists that enable them to field numerous, competitive offers often within days of listing without relying on outside marketing. Ash pointed out that having previously worked with many investors on their list, Simply Marinas knows how they operate and can better tailor a potential sale. The competitive bidding process brought from using a proprietary list is a boon for sellers who often yield returns beyond their expectations.

"The Simply Marinas team's ongoing outreach in the industry delivers velocity and volume of engagements and transactions. That, combined with our longevity in the marina brokerage sector, has helped nurture relationships with countless marina buyers," Ash explained. Buyers are pre-qualified based on their acquisition criteria, financial ability, and experience. Investors, both individuals and institutional buyers, are contacted directly and regularly by brokers who share what properties are hitting the market. "All prospects are vetted and profiled based on our requirements and their investor criteria, ensuring they both belong on our lists and are a match for current and future listings," Ash said. The benefits of a confidential pre-qualified list reach both buyers on the list and sellers. Marina investors on the list know they will be alerted to upcoming sales before the broader market and sellers are able to quickly and efficiently market their properties confidentially. Keeping sales behind closed doors can result in competitive bids, expedited closings, and smooth transactions.

According to Ash, the best part of using a pre-qualified list is that "confidentiality helps protect our client's business and our reputation."
